Japanese-Chinese Clash Threatens a Break in Relations

Soldiers of Japanese Army Capture Walled City of Mukden

Chinese Minister Demands Cessation of Hostilities From Tokyo

(By Associated Press)

Diplomatic relations between China and Japan were sorely threatened Saturday by the occupation of the capital of Manchuria by the Japanese troops and the landing of Japanese forces in China proper.

Japanese soldiers bombarded and captured the waled city of Mukden and another force landed at Tsingtao on the south coast of Shantung Peninsula.

The Japanese attributed the action to an alleged destruction of a section of the South Manchuria railway operated by the Japanese government in a leased zone.

Chinese contended that the railway was damaged by the Japanese themselves as a pretext for the Mukden attack.

Th Japanese cabinet issued orders that the situation should be localized to prevent it from spreading.

Chinese officials also expressed hope that the situation would be localized.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The state department feels that on a basis of the news of the Japanese-Chinese clash at Manchuria there is no ground for construing it as a violation of the Kellogg anti-war pact.

Japan Holds Four Towns

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The state department was informed Saturday that Japanese troops occupied four towns in addition to Mukden, but all foreigners were safe.

Information from American official sources said the Japs took over Newchang, Changchun, Antung and Keokangtdu.

NANKING.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Wang Saturday dispatched a note to Tokyo demanding cessation of hostilities at Mukden and a withdrawal of the Japanese troops to their original positions.

One of Pair Caught in Cass County Break Early Friday

LINDEN, Tex.—One of two prisoners who escaped from the Cass county jail here early Friday was back in jail Friday afternoon following his capture in a clump of woodland between Linden and Atlanta by Sheriff Nat Curtwright.

John Erickson, of Salt Lake City, who was re-captured, escaped with Joe Moss. The latter had not been found Friday afternoon. Erickson is being held on a car theft charge and Moss on a burglary charge.

The two prisoners apparently found a crow bar near their cell, where it was left by workmen remodeling the jail, and pried the door open during the night.

Most of the prisoners have been removed from the jail to a temporary structure during the remodeling process.

Aimee and Spouse Will Make a Movie

Evangelistic Newlyweds to Co-Star in Film, Writes Billy Dove

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—(AP)—Billie Dove, film actress, writing in the Evening Express said that Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton and her new husband, David H. Hutton, soon will enter motion pictures.

The evangelist and her husband, who is a singer at Angelus temple, religious citadel of Mrs. McPherson-Hutton, will produce a picture, Miss Dove said; and will co-star in it.

The actress said it will be a feature production with a religious background and will be attempted on the return of the couple two months hence from a honeymoon in Hawaii.

Mr. and Mrs. Hutton left Tuesday for Portland, Ore., to conduct revival meetings following their surprise marriage Sunday at Yuma, Arizona.

"Although the evangelist herself may not confirm the report at this time," Miss Dove wrote, "I learned from sources close to Angelus temple that the famous bride of the moment is 'going Hollywood.' She will play the starring role and her new husband will be the leading man.

"The evangelist's gesture in inviting leading executives of the motion picture industry to witness her oratorio, 'The Iron Furnace' assumes special significance in view of her plans to turn movie star.

"She will finance her own production and it will be produced on a lavish scale."

152½ Pounds Is Best Watermelon

Porterfield Holds County Title—Arkadelphia 165 —Texas 168

Arkadelphia has apparently captured the 1931 Arkansas watermelon championship.

A telegram to The Star from Philip McCorkle, of the Arkadelphia Siftings-Hearald, said Saturday morning that Romie Cash had pulled his big watermelon and weighed it in at the Arkadelphia Chamber of Commerce offices at 165 pounds.

Atlanta, Texas, had previously reported a melon weighing 168 pounds, the grower writing the full facts of his achievement to Oscar Middlebrooks, of Hempstead county, whose melon of 164 3-4 pounds last year established an all-time record.

Although Hempstead county failed to come up to the 1930 record this year a splendid performance was turned in by a man brand-new to the business, John Porterfield, of Patmos Route Two.

Mr. Portherfield brought in his best melon Saturday, weighing 152½ popnds, and put it on display at Hope Furniture Company. A second melon from his patch, shown during the week at Monts Seed Store, weighed 150 pounds, and was shipped Saturday. A third melon, 145 pounds, is on display at the Hope Furniture company windows with the 152-pounder.

Mr. Porterfield's 10 best melons follows:

152½, 150, 145, 143 3-4, 141, 136, 127, and three at 125 pounds each.

Two Arrested For Detroit Slayings

Anonymous Tip Leads to Raid Near Scene of Triple Execution

DETROIT.—(AP)—An anonymous tip resulted late Friday in the arrest of Raymond Bernstein and Harry Keywell, named by authorities as two of the four men who shot down three racketeers Wednesday in an apartment house.

The arrests were made a few blocks from the apartment where the underworld execution squad killed Joe ("Izzy") Sutker, Joe Lebovitz and Herman ("Hymie") Paul. Bernstein was named by Prosecutor Harry S. Toy as owner and driver of the automobile in which the killers fled.

Irving Millberg and Harry Fleisher are sought for the killings. The four accused killers were identified by Toy as members of the once notorious Purple gang, with which officers say the victims were allied.

Bernstein and Keywell were unarmed when police walked in on them. Both were booked on murder charges.

Mr. Toy said Lebovitz, Sutker and Paul owed Bernstein for 100 gallons of alcohol which they had secured to dilute so as to undersell the alcohol distributed by the Purple gang. An additional motive for the triple slaying given by the prosecutor was the importation of Chicago gunmen to Detroit by Lebovitz and his confederates to extort money from "blind pig" operators and bookmakers.

Mary Lewis Wed To Oil Magnate

Robt. L. Hague New Husband of Singer in Secret Marriage

NEW YORK.—Mary Lewis, the little girl from Little Rock, Ark., who beiame an operatic prima donna, has been the secret bride for several days of Robert L. Hague, a vice president of the Standard Oil Company and divorced husband of Edith Bobe.

Just when or where Miss Lewis—whose Pathe movie contract was cancelled last year—went to the altar with the oil millionaire remained a secret.

The cat was let out of the bag inadvertantly by both the famous soprano's secretary and Hague's butler. The newlyweds, it was said, are out of town on a brief honeymoon, but will be back in a few days.

Miss M. Gallagher, the singer's secretary and companion, became flustered when she realized she had given away her employer's secret.

"Nobody is supposed to know it," she said.

Like Hague, Miss Lewis has been married before. In 1917 she was married to Michael Bohnen, who at that time was starring with her in the Metropolitan Opera Company. Artistic temperaments soon clashed and they were divorced.

The oil magnate's divorce from Mme. Bobe was kept secret for 29 months, becoming known only last March.

Roosevelt Not to Get Aid of Cannon

Bishop Says New York Governor Has Proven He Is a Wet

NEW YORK—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, home from Europe, intends to oppose Governor Roosevelt for president.

"Roosevelt has proven he is a wet," said the bishop. "I absolutely will not support him if he is nominated. I would say as much as could against him. I would do all I could to help defeat any wet. I am rather a good democrat, but if a wet runs, and Hoover runs, I will support Hoover, unless he changes his prohibition stand."

Bishop Cannon, now under investigation by a senate committee on the disposal of campaign funds which he collected in the 1928 fight against Alfred E. Smith, returned from Europe Thursday night on the Mauretania.

He shared a cabin stateroom with three young men. His room was littered with papers and magazines, and he tugged two large brief cases filled with clippings. He said he had been reading about the "Tammany alliance with the underworld."

He denied diverting anti-Smith funds and added: "If Senator Nye thinks I am going to neglect my church work to atentd his meetings, which are ilegal, he is mistaken. If he wants to see me I'll see him, but if there's to be an investigation, let it be before a grand jury."

Missouri Miners Seek Vein of Lead

Believed to Be In Buffalo River Hills East of Jasper, Ark.

JASPER, Ark.—(AP)—A vein of almost solid lead, believed found and then lost in 1857 and 1858, is being sought east of Jasper along the Little Buffalo River.

The search is being conducted by prospectors under the direction of H. F. Snyder, of St. Joseph, Mo., who believes the "lost vein" is located on lands owned by the Snyder interests.

Legends, purportedly authentic, have it that Tom Winchester, of Calhoun county, Ill., came to this region and during a year's stay in 1857-58 found a lead vein on what then was government land.

Winchester's party prospected over the region and, according to legend, found the vein was such solid lead that the ore could be melted and used for ammunition in the old Human rifles, common at the time. Winchester returned to Illinois, intending to come back and develop the find, but his health failed.

When his half-brother, Nathaniel Burdine, came to this section, Winchester gave him a description of the location of the vein, but it was not found. The story of the "hidden mine" has been told and retold for generations.

Lead has been found in Newton county, but the mines do not pay because of the expense in getting the ore to the railroad.

Texas Oil Output Checked Further

Per Well Allowable Ordered Reduced to 185 Barrels Daily

AUSTIN, Texas.—(AP)—The Railroad Commission late Friday issued an order reducing the per well output allowable in the East Texas oil field from 225 to 185 barrels daily. The order will become effective Monday morning.

Meanwhile, representatives of Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, meeting here, pledged their efforts to restrict oil production of the three states to certian definite figures.

The suggested maximum production was Texas, 902,000 barrels daily, Oklahoma, 546,000 barrels, and Kansas 110,000 barrels.

The present Texas production is around 1,000,000 barrels. Those attending today's conference were representatives of the governors and oil regulatory bodies of their states.

The new East Texas order said the gas-oil ratio in that field should not exceed 500 cubic feet of gas per barrel of oil. The present East Texas production is around 425,000 barrels daily. The new order should cut it to considerably less than 400,000 barrels, pending bringing in of new wells.

The Railroad Commission will hold a hearing September 30 to consider setting a new allowable production figure for all oil fields other than East Texas and the Panhandle.

The Panhandle hearing will be held at Amarillo October 3.

The directors announced the establishment of three optional polls by which the growers may market their cotton through the association.

The stage is set for the formal opening of the annual Southwest Arkansas Fair in Hope Monday night, September 21.

The Fair management has announced that the opening program will be one of the most elaborate night programs of the week. The feature will be a grand display of fireworks in which will be seen a large number of the very latest set-pieces manufactured, and a gorgeous display of aerial fireworks.

Everything is in readiness for receiving what promises to be the greatest array of agricultural, live stock, poultry, canning, textile and educational exhibits ever shown in this section of the state. Exhibits began pouring in Saturday and by 6 p. m. Monday, it is predicted that the large exhibit hall will be filled to its capacity.

McKenzie Heads 2 Batesville Schools

Superintendent of the City Schools and President of Arkansas College

BATESVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Ury McKenzie plays an important part in the educational life of Batesville.

With opening of Arkansas College's 60th annual session, Mr. McKenzie assumed his position as president of the college and superintendent of the Batesville public schools.

And neither position could be considered a sinecure. Arkansas College, a Presbyterian institution, is the oldest chartered college in the state and its opening day registration showed more students on hand than at any time last year.

The Batesville public school system includes an A-grade accredited high school and has probably the second highest enrollment of any high school north of the Arkansas river.

Only a block separates the two schools and offices and secretaries are maintained at both places.

Mr. McKenzie was elected president of Arkansas College last spring when financial difficulties threatened its shutdown. He succeeded Sidney Pickens as city school superintendent when the latter's health failed three years ago.

Before going to Batesville, Mr. McKenzie had served city schools in Texarkana and Hot Springs.

A Screen for the Sewage Tank

WHEN the paved route of highway No. 67 was brought into Hope from the west it caused the city's sewage disposal tank to be rebealed plainly to the eye and nose of passing motorists.

Residents of Hope, leaving the city and returning, are perpetually reminded of this unpleasant advertisement just to the west of us.

The Star suggests that perhaps something can be done about it. It is no fault of the sewage system that the tank happens to be located where it is. When the system was constructed, the haghway was north of the railroad. The state moved its road, and as there is no good reason for abandoning a perfectly good disposal plant, the two are right alongside of each other today.

What we suggest is, that the city or its citizens might plant a quick-growing hedge to screen off the tank from the view of passing tourists. Lygistum is a good variety. Vines and hedges around this stone tank would put it effectively out of sight.

The smell is obnoxious, but it alone matters little to swift-moving traffic. What hurts is the combination of smell and sight, revealing this as the city's disposal plant.

With the plant out of sight, the smell wouldn't matter so much.

Where Courage Counts

IN THE grand scale of human events it is unlikely that the literary works of the late Sir Hall Saine, British novelist, will be immortal, but his life was a gleaming example of confidence an dcourage.

His difficulties were the difficulties of the average man of the great mases of the world. Similar difficulties are discouraging people in every walk of life every day. Yet, he has the confidence in himself and the courage to surmount them.

He was left an orphan at a very early age. He spent his life in poverty with relatives. When he died, at the age of 78, he was said to be one of the wealthiest novelists in the world. His home was a castle.

But these achievements alone are not extraordinary. Many men have gone from rags to riches.

The important point is that his early literary works were ridiculed and laughed at. He was openly derided. It took a great soul to transcend that. But his confidence did not flinch. Nor his courage. He knew what he wanted to do, and continued in this faith until he achieved it. But the going was hard.

He studied architecture. He tried journalism. Then he became secretary to Dante Gabriele Rossetti, the great poet-painter. This association fired him with the determination to carry on his fight for recognition.

Then, he "arrived." His first book, "The Shadow of Crime," was still being widely read when his second, "Son of Hagar," appeared. It was acclaimed, and widely distributed.

His novels were adapted for the stage. Royalties poured in by the thousands. New stories, new novels, and new plays followed. Because of the peculiar construction of his novels, they were easily dramatized.

This continued throughout the rest of his life. Today there are few persons who have not heard of Sir Caine if they have not read him.

Whether his works will survive the aggression of time is of little consequence in this sense. He was a great writer, if not an immortal one ,and became a great writer through courage. A less courageous person might have withdrawn into oblivion when he was ridiculed. Sir Hall Caine might have tried to make a living out of architecture.

His life was prototype. It is a hint of the countless other geniuses who perhaps will never be discovered because they can not face ridicule. Society is kseptical of the man who lacks courage.

He Can Have "Dear Lee"

WHEN Lee Wacaster had shot and killed his sweetheart, and inflicted a wound on himself that almost proved fatal, he was transferred to Little Rock for safe keeping. He was in the custody of Warden Todhunter of the Arkansas state penitentiary.

When Wacaster came bac khere for trial, and while awaiting trial, he received a letter to "Dear Lee" from Warden Todhunter. Todhunter gave assurances to Wacaster he would be present at the trial and do all possible for him at the trial.

Todhunter was present at the trial, and testified for the defense.

Prosecuting Attorney Emory paid his respect to the warden of the state penitentiary who had so interested himself in the trial, and his course met approval of sentiment here.

The warden of a state prison is an officer of state, the same as a prosecuting attorney or a sheriff, or any other state officer. His influences normally should be to help the state. It is expected of him. It is not expected that he will be seriously interested in defeating the purposes of other state officers to fully enforce law.

The jury verdict proclaimed Wacaster guilty of murder and fixed his punishment at life in state prison. He will be with Mr. Todhunter the remainder of his living days, if that sentence is carried out. It won't be. The circumstances already indicate that the verdict of the trial jury will be thwarted some years hence, sooner or later.—Hot Springs Sentinel-Record.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—This town becomes almost denuded of its most interesting personalities in the summer, but Nelson Rounsevell arrived and that made up for many of the absences.

Rounsevell is the publisher of the Panama American in Panama City and as a publisher he has been first of all a hell-raiser. It was he who launched the recent sensation here about those flourishing saloons and brothels on U. S. government owned land in Colon which pay rent to the U. S. treasury. He wants the government to cut out that business and get out of Colon.

He likes to say that he is an ex-gambler and he is, but at 54 he has also been a farmer, school teacher, lawyer, justice of the peace, ditch-digger, locomotive engineer, lumber man, banker, real estate builder, water works promoter, carpenter, ship's dishwasher and an army buck private. Perhaps the high spot of his career was the Panama revolution some months ago, in which Rounsevell played no small part.

The Panama American, only newspaper south of the Rio Grande in continental America, founded, edited, owned and published by Americans, was the organ of the revolutionists. Rounsevell says the revolution really began soon after the paper was founded in 1925 when one of the wealthy politicos who owned the opposition papers announced publicly that he would "drive that damn gringo out of Panama in six months." Anyway, Rounsevell started $15,000 in debt and built the American up in Panama and the Canal Zone until now, with his friends in power, he is sitting on top of the heap.

Hell-Raising Helped

Hell-raising boosted circulation and paid dividends, although Rounsevell was a constant thorn in the side of the War and State Departments as well as the Panama government. He encountered frequent arrests, libel suits, deportation efforts and challenges to duel. Last year he was hailed into court 21 times and editors and columnists of his Spanish section were beaten up and framed. The first editor of his Spanish section was Harmodio Arias, now Panamanian minister to the United States and probable next president.

Rounsevell's first crusade was a successful attempt to clean up what he termed scandalous conditions in the Canal Zone courts. The U. S. district judge promised to toss him out of the isthmus but it was the judge who was finally removed and replaced by a new judge who cleaned up. Then for two years the American campaigned against the Canal Zone health department, once printing 51 consecutive daily editorials against its alleged inefficiency.

After a presidential investigation the chief health officer was removed. An outbreak of smallpox helped Rounsevell put that campaign over. Meanwhile, in both Spanish and English, Rounsevell attacked the corruption of the Panama government, arousing the people to a revolutionary state of mind. He found the people in sympathy with him and threw open his columns to the Accion Communal, the organization of young patriots which sought reforms, gave them an otherwise unattainable avenue of publicity and printed the coded notices of their meetings.

Helped Revolutionists

Rounsevell was consultant and adviser of the revolutionists and sat in with them as they definitely planned their uprising six weeks ahead. He says it was the only purely civilian revolution ever successfully achieved. All through that exciting night Rounsevell stood in his shop, turning out thousands of proclamations and manifestos while his friends upset the government with shotguns, butcher knives and pawnshop revolvers. He printed and sold 52,000 copies of extras that day as against a previous maximum circulation of 7500 and 10,000 since. One of his linotype operators had been let off to become chief of police for the night.

He has opened a bureau for his paper here and will fight through Congress his two-year-old effort to get this government out of the real estate business in Colon.

Why spoil the day with hate or greed
Or any little selfish deed?
Why mar the morning with a sneer
Or add one mite to what is here
Of bitterness and wrong and sin
Some pretty little gain to win?
Rather choose to this day's end
To play the comrade and the friend;
To see in spite of pain and care,
The joy of living everywhere;
And so to live than none shall say
That you for him had spoiled the day.

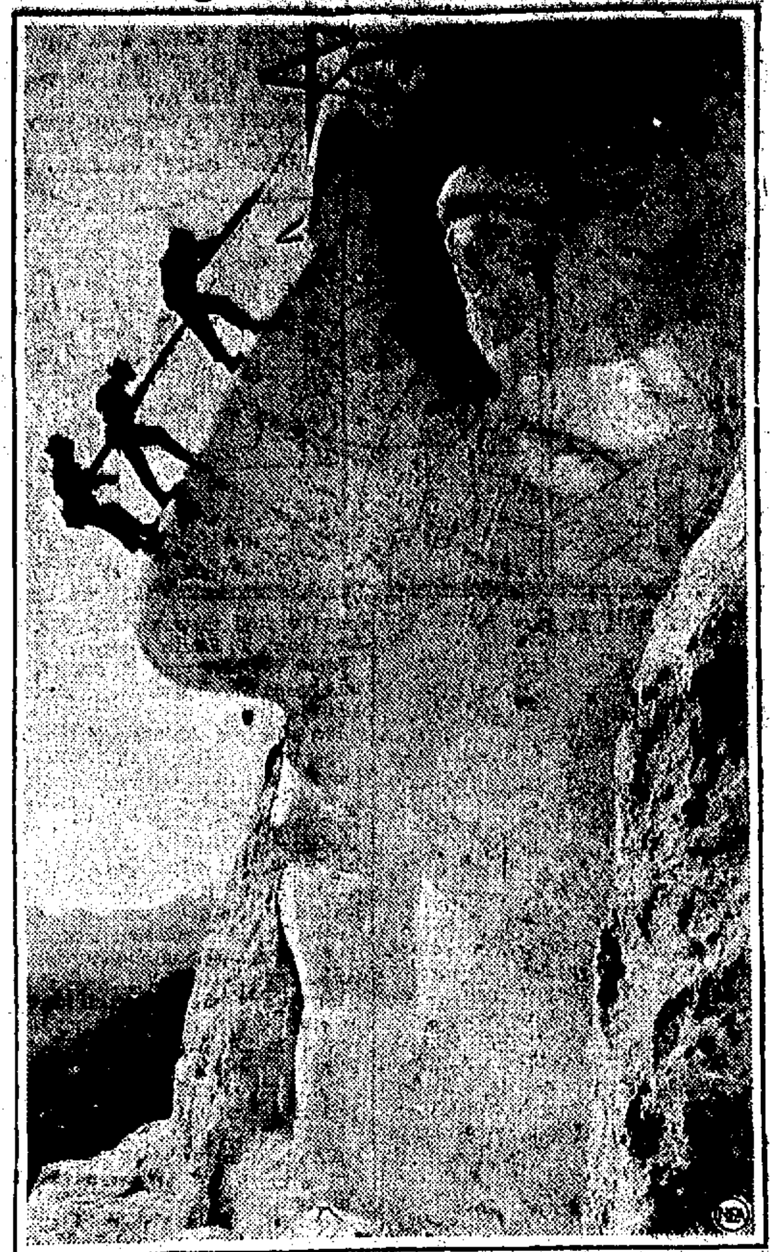
Washington's "Great Stone Face"



Carved in granite, the great stone face of George Washington is shown here looking down from the Mount Rushmore Memorial in the Black Hills of South Dakota. Size of the head, now nearing completion, is indicated by the men working on the nose. The head is 60 feet from chin to top of forehead and is built on the scale of a man 465 feet tall. Likenesses of Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt also are being chiseled into the stone

Pay Cut Menances 1000-Year Loyalty of Britain's Navy

These pictures help tell the story of the serious problem faced by Great Britain in the "passive strike" among enlisted men of its Atlantic fleet, the first major break in the traditional loyalty of England's navy in a thousand years, except for a mutiny in 1797. The men refused to work, following dissatisfaction over recent pay cuts. The top picture shows the great battle cruiser Hood, while below is a scene aboard the H. M. S. Rodney, pride of Britain's navy, as the men exercised. Both of these vessels are at the remote Scottish port of Invergordon, in the heart of the trouble zone. Left is Sir Austen Chamberlain, first lord of the admirality, who copes with the problem.

Love
Mother

Digging into the effects of Harry F. Powers, West Virginia "Bluebeard," Clarksburg police have found this letter with which the three children of Mrs. Asta B. Eicher, one of his woman victims, were lured to Clarksburg and slain. It was addressed to Grethe Eicher, eldest of the children, at Park Ridge, Ill., shortly before Powers, then known as Cornelius O. Pierson, went back there to get them. Officers say that Powers either forged the letter or forced Mrs. Eicher to write it while she was confined as his prisoner in a dungeon under his garage near Clarksburg.

Housewives "Can the Surplus" for Needy

A "Can the Surplus" campaign, the object of which is to preserve the surplus fruits and vegetables of the present bumper crops for distribution among the needy this winter, is spreading among Ohio housewives and seems likely to find favor in other states. Above is a group of women of the Grace Reformed church at Akron canning fruit, donated by farmers, in the church kitchen. At the left is Mrs. Daniel E. Morgan, wife of Cleveland's city manager, at work. The movement is supported by newspapers, city officials, women's clubs, church organizations and other groups.

War Foes Meet at Races—Girl Pilot Thrills Fans

EX-ENEMIES SHAKE—Two famous World War heroes who poured machine gun bullets at each other high in the air over European battlefields are shown here shaking hands as they met on the ground for the first time. They are Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, left, America's ace of aces, and Major Ernst Udet, noted German war pilot, who greeted each other on a friendly field of competition—the national air races at Cleveland, Ohio Rickenbacker shot down 26 German aircraft, Udet is credited with 62 allied planes.

GUILTY LIPS

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

Author of "MAD MARRIAGE"

©1931 BY NEA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Pretty NORMA KENT, 20-year-old secretary, marries MARK TRAVERS, son of F. M. TRAVERS, millionaire real estate dealer, in spite of the father's opposition and threats to disinherit Mark.

The story opens in Marlboro, middle western metropolis. Mark sells his expensive roadster to get money for the honeymoon and he and Norma go to fashionable Blue Springs. There Norma meets HOLLIS STONE, and it is evident from the girl's manner that she has known Stone before and for some reason seems to fear him.

Their money is soon gone, partly due to Mark's gambling. With $500 borrowed from Stone the couple return to Marlboro. Mark sets out on a round of pleasure seeking instead of hunting a job. He introduces Norma to NATALIE PRICE, a debutante, who has long hoped to marry Mark. When their funds dwindle again Mark and Norma move to a cheap apartment. Mark begins to hunt work seriously. He gets one job and loses it. Then he becomes a floorwalker in Blossomdale's department store. Norma practices rigid economies at home. When Mark's mother comes to call on them and urges the young man to seek reconciliation with his father Mark refuses. He and Norma spend a happy Thanksgiving Day together. A few days later GEORGE JOHNSON, an employe of the elder Travers, comes to Mark and tells him his father wants to see him. Reluctantly Mark goes to his father's office.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVIII

TRAVERS eyed his son levelly. "When I make a bargain," he began, "I expect fair return for my money. Otherwise I'm not interested. And if you agree to what I'm suggesting I'll expect you to keep that agreement as rigidly as any business contract."

"Let's hear those terms you mentioned."

"All right. Here they are. You are to return to employment in this organization on exactly an equal footing with other employes. Your salary will be fixed on a basis of your work. If at the end of a year I am convinced you have in you the making of a real business man you will come into the company as a junior officer with a certain amount of stock to your credit."

"Father! You honestly mean this?"

"Would I be sitting here wasting hours when I might be much more comfortable at home if I didn't mean it!"

Emotion he could not find words for overwhelmed Mark Travers. He flushed. "Gee, Dad, that's—that's white of you!" he exclaimed. "I want to tell you I've been sorry a good many times for the things I said that night—I didn't mean what I said—!"

"No? Then forget it! I've said things I didn't mean and been sorry about them. Forget it, Mark. It's been hard on your mother, though, to have you away."

"I know. I'm sorry for that too. Oh, Dad—I'll take you up on this thing! I'll show you I can make good too! You'll see that I've changed about a lot of things—!"

The elder Travers was on his feet, hand outstretched. He took Mark's hand in his and shook it firmly. "Then it's agreed," he said. "When can you start?"

"Why—why almost any time. I'll tell them I'm quitting tomorrow at Blossomdale's." The red of his cheeks deepened. "You know, I suppose, that's where I've been."

The answer was a grunt that might have been interpreted, "Heard something of the sort."

"Dad!" Mark exclaimed jubilantly. "Gee, I can't believe this has happened! I don't know what to say to you. It's—it's wonderful!"

* * *

IF the elder Travers were equally moved he restrained all signs of it. "So it's settled, then," he said, stepping back and heaving a sigh of satisfaction. "Remember those terms—one year without favors, unquestioning obedience to superiors and hard work."

"I'll show you, Dad!" Mark was grinning broadly. "Those terms—why they're nothing at all! I'll show you!"

"Fine. By the way," (the father's eyes narrowed slightly as he spoke) "your first job will be something a little out of the ordinary. Not at all unpleasant, I hope. It's a little piece of special work I want you to do for me—"

"What is it?"

"Sit down." Travers dropped to his desk chair, waved the young man to one beside it. "I told you if you agreed to my terms it would mean a year of hard work. You've already agreed. Today's Wednesday, isn't it? Tell them at Blossomdale's you're quitting Saturday. Monday you can begin here. Then Tuesday at midnight you sail for Liverpool."

"Dad!"

Travers was nodding. "Tuesday at midnight," he repeated. "You have your passport, haven't you? I'll have everything else arranged. Monday you'll be in Liverpool—"

"But what on earth—?" Mark cut in. "I don't know what you're talking about!"

"No. But I'm going to tell you. Promised to obey instructions, didn't you? Promised to tackle any job without favoritism! This first assignment, as I said, is a little unusual. I hope it isn't going to prove difficult. Now here's what I'm getting at—!"

The father paused long enough to touch a match to his cigar. "I sent Johnson to tell you to come here today for two reasons," he continued. "One because, well, you're the only son your mother and I have. Maybe I seem a harsh man sometimes. I'm not so bad inside. Anyhow your mother and I need you, Mark. That's one reason I sent for you. The other is this business in Spain.

"You remember — maybe you don't though—that Jules was in this country for a Spanish copper mining concern when Alicia met him? Looking for American capital. Well, he persuaded me to go into the thing rather heavily. That was two years ago. Going on three now and it's been a bigger loss every year. It's come to the place where I've got to know what's going on—"

* * *

MARK had been following the words wide-eyed. "But, Dad, I don't know anything about copper mining!"

"No. You don't. It isn't going to be necessary. I've got a man who knows all about it going over next month. You see, Mark, I can stand the loss. They come and we take them and fight it out on some other line. I can stand the loss. What I'm sending you over there for is to find out just how much Jules is in on this business. I want to know if the deal is square. If it is—we go on with it and fight. If Alicia's husband in spite of his high-sounding titles is just another foreign crook I want to know that too.

"You'll go over there ahead of Moffett, the engineer. There's been nothing said or done as yet to arouse suspicion. That's why the trip must be made at this time. And you're the one to make it. Don't you see I can't send an ordinary employe over there and tell him what's in my mind about my own son-in-law? Besides, you can go about with Jules as no employe could—"

"It's a spying job you're asking me to undertake, is it?"

"Now wait a minute! Not so hot-headed. It's nothing on earth but a straight business deal. I want you to go to France for three weeks, drop over at this mine and have a look at it, go to see Jules and Alicia and make certain inquiries about Jules. It's a thing that's done every day in business. A man has to know his associates are honest. If they're dishonest he has to out-smart them. Well, that's a very brief outline. We'll go over the whole thing in detail later. You're working for me on this job, Mark. Directly under my orders and no one else!"

Mark met his glance. "No use to pretend I know what it's all about," he said, "but I'll try to do what you want. How long will I be abroad?"

"That depends. Ought to make the trip, I should say, in a month or five weeks. We'll see how it works out."

The young man was smiling. "Well, a month in France is certainly no hardship. Be able to stop over a day or so in Paris, will I? Say—I'll get a kick out of showing Norma Paris!"

The father pursed his lips. "Certainly you can spend a day or two in Paris. Matter of fact, on the surface this journey is to appear a pleasure trip. You're to do all the things you would if you were on vacation. Jules and Alicia will assume that's why you're there. On this other matter of taking—er, Norma—well, I'm afraid that's out of the question."

"But, Dad—?"

"It will be better for you," his father went on evenly, "and also for your wife if you make this trip alone. In the first place, though you are to seem to be on a pleasure trip, you will really be working. It's a conviction of mine that a man can't keep his mind on business when he's traveling with his wife. Arbitrary ruling of the company. If I let you take Norma along it would be favoritism and I told you there was to be none. On the other hand she can be more comfortable here. We'll see that everything is done for her. It would please your mother if she'd come to the house and stay with us while you're gone. When this year's ended and you've proven you know how to work—if you do—you and she can take a three or four months' trip abroad and do it properly."

MARK said slowly, "I hate to leave her but, as you say, it may be best. Five weeks is a long time, though—"

"Why, five weeks is nothing! Well—do you think you understand your first assignment?"

"Enough to say I'll tackle it. I'll be tied up at the store until Saturday, of course. When will you go over the whole thing with me?"

"On Monday. Monday morning. By the way, your mother and I would like to have you and Norma come to dinner Saturday evening."

Mark's eyes brightened. "Fine!" he said. "By George—do you know what time it's getting to be? Look at that clock!"

The dial of the handsome bronze timepiece on the book case indicated it was after 6:30.

"Norma'll be phoning the police!" Mark exclaimed. "I'd better call her right away." He picked up the telephone from his father's desk and gave the number. Presently he was saying into the mouthpiece, "I'm on my way home, Norma. Everything's O. K. Got a lot to tell you. No, it will have to wait until I get there. It's good news, though. Wonderful! See you in half an hour. 'Bye!"

The elder Travers was standing, hat and overcoat on. "Harvey's downstairs with the car," he announced. "Run you out?"

"Thanks. It'll be a big favor."

On the threshold—just before they left the room—Mark turned and clapped a hand on his father's arm. "Dad," he said, fumbling for the words, "I wish I could tell you how I appreciate all this—!"

"That's all right!"

The interview was ended. The pair sauntered down the corridor to the elevator car. Throughout the drive to the east side apartment their talk was of irrelevant subjects.

The big limousine paused long enough for Mark to step to the sidewalk, then darted away. Thirty minutes later F. M. Travers was relinquishing his hat and coat to a servant.

"Where's Mrs. Travers?" he asked.

"I think she's in her room, sir. She said dinner would be at 7:30."

"Yes, of course."

Travers mounted the stairs heavily. He was not unusually stout, rather well built for one of his years, but he had worked hard all his life and moved customarily as though he were tired.

Before a door at the head of the stairs he paused and knocked. A voice inside called "Who is it?"

"It's I—Frank."

"Come in, dear!"

Travers opened the door. His wife, in a low-cut gown of gray lace, turned from the dressing table and came toward him. "Oh, Frank—" she cried, "did you see him?"

Her husband nodded. He placed a matter-of-fact kiss on her forehead. "I did," he announced. "Everything's settled! He's leaving Monday night!"

Mrs. Travers raised anxious gray eyes. "And the girl—?" she asked.

"The girl!" Travers repeated with an unpleasant smile. "She'll be gone in a week!"

Hello, Sully!

THE White Sox have a new third baseman in the person of Billy Sullivan whose father was a catcher for the same team 20 years ago. Young Billy will become one of the greatest players in the game, and the words are not mine, mind you, but Connie Mack's.

Paging Babe Ruth

THE next time I see Babe Ruth, I am going to ask him what player on the A's can run 100 yards in the least time. The Babe you know recently cleaned up handsomely backing Ben Chapman to beat Carl Reynolds. And if he says Haas or Cochrane are his candidates, I'll have to bet him. My choice is Jimmy Foxx.

Jack May Change Mind

IT is not entirely without the range of possibilities that Jack Dempsey can clean up well over a half million kopecks before the middle of December bowling over palookas. If he should, it is also not entirely a goofy notion that he will change his mind about wanting to come back.

Eat Up, Bing

AMONG the ball players who will not starve this winter is Bing "Dark Folks" Miller, the A's outfielder. Operative X-299 has just informed me that 80 pigs were butchered the other day at Bing's farm at Vinton, Ia. Bing just passed his 37th birthday the other day, and when you get that old (they say) pig tastes good.

Nice Investment

CHUCK KLEIN has proved a pretty fair investment, considering the depression and all, for the Phils. The other day they put a price tag of $150,000 on the former Indiana mill worker. They bought him from Fort Wayne for something like $7500.

* * *

Ha! Just the Thing!

NOW that a new football with eight seams instead of four has appeared, we have three games in which new spheroids were used this year. I wonder if the rule-makers couldn't get together and put a little novelty into all three games by letting the ball players use the new football, giving the gridiron heroes the new baseball to kick, run with and pass and by letting the golfers have the new football.

Just a Thought

KNUTE ROCKNE turned out a great many very good football coaches in his day. None of them, however, produced a team that matched Rock's own creations at South Bend. Which gives rise to the question: Will Hunk Anderson, Jack Chevigny, et al., be able to turn out a championship eleven this fall? And: How long will the Rockne ideals persist?

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

FULLBACK REB RUSSELL, Northwestern's wildest wildcat last year, has only to enroll at West Point to become what the boys would call a veteran football player. . . . According to a reliable sports scribe, the Rebel played some freshman football at Oklahoma . . . and some more freshman football at Kansas Aggies . . . after which he played some yearling football at Nebraska . . . followed by some more football with the Northwestern freshmen. . . . Russell made the Purple varsity last season . . . and was pretty much of a pain to Notre Dame. . . . He's available for the Wildcat backfield this season. . . . When Art Shires was asked why he played football for three different colleges in three years, he calmly remarked: "Hell, I got a better offer."

Lefty Grove Wins His 30th Victory

Lefty Grove, Connie Mack's great pitcher, became the first left-handed ever to win 30 games in one season by virtue of his 2-to-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox Friday at Philadelphia.

Grove let the Sox down with five hits, and ran his pitching record to 30 victories against 3 defeats.

In New York the Yankees won their eleventh straight, beating the St. Louis Browns 14 to 4 as Babe Ruth slammed out his 43d home run. Boston won a double-header from Cleveland, 6-1 and 6-4. Washington took 14 innings to beat Detroit 4-3. It was Marberry's 16th pitching triumph.

Louis Cardinals defeated the Giants, 4 to 3. Pittsburgh bowed to Ed Brandt, of the Boston Braves, 6-2 in the first game of a double-bill but won the final 4-1. Brooklyn won over the Cubs, 3 to 2.

[illegible] Made From Arkansas Cotton

Being Used For Letterheads by Cudahy Packing Company

LITTLE ROCK—In addition to investing 10 per cent of its sales from September 1 to December 1 in cotton to help the South and promote its general welfare, the Cudahy Packing Company also is making use of letterheads manufactured from Arkansas cotton, it was said in a letter to the Gazette Thursday from J. A. Stroud, manager here. The letter was written on paper made from Arkansas cotton.

"The alarming decrease in American exports of cotton during the past years," Mr. Stroud wrote, "and a like increase in Russian exports of cotton, make it imperative that many new uses for the staple must be found rather than to depend on decreased acreage in this country, which would be wholly offset by increased acreage in Russia.

"Our laboratories are busy searching for new uses for cotton. We trust that this condition exists in the laboratories of many other progressict firms. Knowing that you are vitall yinterested in cotton as well as ourselves, we extend to you our hearty co-operation and friendship for your valued publication."

On September 1, E. A. Cudahy Jr., announced the investment of 10 per cent of the company's sales in Southern territories in cotton "to help our good friends in the South and to promote the general welfare."
